3 Astros Ballgames – GREAT SEATS

Visit Henry Morrison Flagler Museum

Henry Morrison Flagler Museum (also called “Whitehall”) is a stunning Gilded Age mansion in Palm Beach, Florida — once the winter home of oil magnate Henry Morrison Flagler and now a celebrated museum and National Historic Landmark.

Completed in 1902 and designed in the elegant Beaux-Arts style, the 75-room estate was hailed as “more wonderful than any palace in Europe” on its opening. Inside its 100,000 square feet, visitors encounter lavish period décor, art, and furnishings that evoke the lavish lifestyle of America’s turn-of-the-century elite.

The museum not only showcases the grandeur of Whitehall but also chronicles Flagler’s profound impact on Florida — from the development of the state’s railroads and tourism to shaping Palm Beach into a premier destination.

Visiting the Flagler Museum feels like stepping back in time — a journey through architectural splendor, historical legacy, and timeless elegance. Whether you’re a history buff, architecture lover, or simply curious, it’s a must-see highlight on any Palm Beach itinerary.

Ignite the Night Isle Dinner & Show aboard the Jungle Queen – A Night to Remember

This is a 4-hour evening experience aboard the historic Jungle Queen Riverboat. It begins with a narrated sightseeing cruise down the scenic New River — often called the “Venice of America” — where you’ll drift past opulent waterfront estates on “Millionaire’s Row,” mega-yachts, and tropical waterways.

Dinner on a Tropical Island

After the cruise, the boat docks at Jungle Queen’s private island — a relaxed, open-air tropical setting. Here you’ll indulge in an all-you-can-eat Southern-style BBQ feast: fall-off-the-bone baby back ribs, hand-battered chicken tenders, comforting sides like mac ‘n’ cheese or coleslaw, cornbread and more.

“Ignite the Night” Show — Fire, Dance &

Island Vibes

Post-dinner, the island stage comes alive with a colorful Polynesian-inspired show: expect hula dancers, live drumming, traditional island dance and music — and a dramatic fire-knife / fire performance that lights up the night. It’s lively, family-friendly, and a uniquely tropical evening out.

Finishing the Night Right

After the show, guests board the riverboat for a calm, moonlit cruise back to the dock — an ideal time to soak in the city lights, the water’s reflection, and reflect on the evening’s fun.
